

John Haughery, PhD, CSCE is an assistant professor of Automation & Electronics Technologies and coordinator of the Automation & Robotics Engineering Technology program at Millersville University of Pennsylvania. His 15+ years of teaching, research, and practice are focused on control system integration including industrial automation, industrial/mobile robotics, human-machine interactions, motor/motion control, programmable logic controllers, safety systems, explosion proof/intrinsically safe systems, industrial networking, and electric power/energy systems. Dr. Haughery is a Certified Senior Controls Engineer (CSCE) and the Controls Exam Commissioner for the Association of Technology, Management and Applied Engineering's (ATMAE) Board of Certification.